Essential Oils and Oleo Resin

Essential oils are concentrated plant extracts that capture the natural aromatic compounds and other beneficial properties of various plants. Essential oils can be derived from different parts of a plant, such as the flowers, leaves, bark, or roots. With around a hundred essential oils available today, each one carries a distinct flavour and scent of the plant, from which it is extracted.

Oleoresins are nothing but spice extracts, obtained by solvent extraction of respected spices, followed by the standardisation of the active ingredients which gives the typical flavour, colour and aroma for a particular spice. The advantage of using oleoresins over natural spices include consistency in quality, reduced dosage, increased shelf life due to no bacterial contamination and easy standardisation.
